

Bryan. "Oh, Huldah, I am a sad failure and you are a wonderful success in business. Huldah, you told me to go to the city and find myself. I couldn't go outside of the ordinary humdrum worker, but you, Huldah, you have found me, indeed?"

The store thrived, and when Bryan returned to his city after his trips it was like some joyous home-coming. One day he said to Huldah:

"I spoke about your finding me. Please don't let me get lost again."

and that broke the ice toward further discussion. Huldah forgot the restriction concerning the subject of love, for she was convinced at last that Bryan needed her and would never tire of her dear presence.

INCUBATOR WAR BABY IS ADOPTED INTO FAMILY OF WEALTHY WOMAN

After being raised in an incubator at Coney Island and Atlantic City, this baby has been adopted by Mrs. Richard Elkins, daughter-in-law of the late Senator Stephen Elkins of West Virginia, and given the name of John Gerald Lonsdale, the family name of Mrs. Elkins. The boy's father died in battle in France before the birth of the baby and the mother died soon after.
